Agent Ryan Locates a Mine of "Queer Money Near Middletown - He Is Wounded and One of His Prisoners Gets Away-Both Were Hit in the Gun Play.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 16.-United States Secret Service Agent R. J. Ryan of New York arrested two green goeds men to-day at Mechanicstown, a suburb of this city, where they have been operating in the Ravine Inn, a hotel run by Jack Coles, a local sport. Ryan, accompanied by his deputy, Daniel F. Weeks, and Erie Detective William Kane of this city, raided the place late this

The two men gave their names as I. J. Moore and A. Harding. A search of the premises revealed packages containing it is said, about $1,000,000 of "queer" money. Ryan and Weeks started to take their prisoners to the county jail at Goshen, leaving Kane in charge of Coles's prem-

They had proceeded but a short distance toward the trolley road near by when the prisoners made an attack on their captors with billies. Both officers were knocked to the ground by blows on the head. The prisoners lost no time in making a dash for liberty toward a nearby wood Ryan and Weeks got up. They were dazed, but drew their revolvers and began firing at the fugitives. The latter were also armed and returned the fire.

Then followed a running fight for over a mile, in which over thirty shots were fired. The firing attracted the attention of Kane at Coles's place, and he, too, joined in the chase with a drawn revolver. Moore is a big, burly man and was soon headed off by Kane, whose well directed aim had shattered his pistol hand. Moore turned off in another direction and ran up against Weeks and his revolver. Moore surrendered after a tussle.

Harding, who is said to be the leader of the gang, being more fleet of foot and having good wind, soon had his pursuers distanced, going in the direction of Midway Park, a nearby pleasure resort.

Moore was taken back to the hotel, where Proprietor Coles and several other men about the place were taken into custody and another start was made for Goshen jail, where the prisoners were finally landed. Coles was subsequently released.

The whole country thereabouts was searched in vain for Harding by a posse of farmers, headed by the detectives, but no trace of him was found. It is believed that he escaped by boarding a passing train on the Ontario and Western Railroad.

It is believed that one of the shots fired took effect in Harding's back. While he was running he was seen to throw up his hands and fall, but immediately he jumped up and started on again. On a fence that he scaled in his flight were traces of blood.

Moore was arrested on the same charge about two years ago in Buffalo. He escaped punishment then by jumping his $10,000 bail bond. He had $1,115 in good mone y in his pocket and is said to be worth $100,000. He owns a summer residence at Greenwood Lake, where his wife is now Detective Ryan's scalp was furrowed by a bullet, while another bullet was flattened on his breastbone.

At least half a dozen persons have been operating through the mails in this locality for the past year, and several farmers as well as others have been victimized in sums ranging from $100 to $1,000.

DOG WITH A STOMACH ACHE. Jumped Out of Window, Created Several Panies and Was Not Shot.

young woman was dining in the Garrick Hotel café at 202 West Forty-second street last night with a white bull terrier ving at her feet. The terrier suddenly began to snarl and throw handsprings. Then it jumped out of a window in the second story, hit an awning, bounced to the sidewalk and ran down Seventh avenue, howling. The cry "mad dog" was raised and pedestrians scuried for doorways.

In Paddell's café, 441 Seventh avenue, many were eating. The bull terrier dashed through the dining room and created aparis. Chairs fell over waiters dropped

He laughed at the threats, not believing that they would be carried out. Both his eyes were blackened and he was etherwise badly bruised.

Last Trip of the Old Gunbeat Essex. QUEBEC, July 16 .- The old United States gunboat Essex, 1,365 tons, has reached here from Portsmouth, N. H., on her way to Toledo, Ohio, where she is to be turned over to the naval reserves for a training ship. She experienced a rough trip, and has been so much damaged by rocks, winds and waves that she will have to be repaired in Montreal before passing through the canals. Her trip from Halifax to Quebec occupied fourteen days.

Sound Steamer Providence Launched.

QUINCY, Mass., July 16.-The new passen QUINCY, Mass., July 16.—The new passenger steamer Providence, built for the Fall River Line service, was launched at the works of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company this afternoon. Miss Martha Wilson, daughter of Edmund B. Wilson of Providence, broke a bottle of champagne over the bows of the new craft and named her. The Providence is a side-wheeler. She will accommodate about 2,500 passengers.

OUR NAVY YARD DEFICIENT. Facilities for Repairing Vessels Inadequate Only Two Dry Docks Available

WASHINGTON, July 16 .- Naval Constructor William J. Baxter, who has charge of construction work at the Brooklyn navy yard, has called the attention of the Navy Department to the inadequate facilities that now exist there for dry-docking vessels of war.

He says that dry dock No. 3 is nearly worn out and can be used very little and that dry dock No. 4, which was authorized in June, 1900, has not even been begun.

in June, 1900, has not even been begun. This leaves only two dry dock savailable, and Mr. Baxter says that the docking facilities of the yard are so inadequate that it will be embarrassing to those in charge of repair work when the North Atlantic fleet next puts in there to be overhauled.

The work of constructing dry docks is under the control of the Bureau of Yards and Docks. Owing to difficulties in securing a proper site at the yard for dry dock No. 4, this bureau did not advertise for bids to construct the dock until about a year ago, three years after it was authorized.

The amount available for the work was $1,000,000, but the lowest bid was more than $200,000 above that price. It was then determined to change the plans so that the dock could be built within the appropriation, but up to this time no new bids have been called for.

MAY PROTEST TO CANADA. Against Efforts to Colonize Northwest Territory With Americans.

WASHINGTON, July 16 .- It is probable that the State Department will bring to the attention of the Bri ish Foreign Office the effort now being made by the Canadian Government to induce emigration from the United States to the Canadian Northwest Territory. Officials of the State Department hold that, while there can be no objec ion to such a movement run by un-official agencies, the fact that the Canadian Government is conducting it makes the matter a proper one for official remonstrance.

The Canadian Government, through one of is assis ant secretaries, has been sending out thousands of letters to citizens of the Wes ern and Northwes ern Sta'es, describing the resources of the Northwest Territory and offering special inducements to emi-grants from the United States.

The Weather.

The Weather.

There was a warm wave making definite formation over the country east of the Bocky Mountains yesterday and the temperature began to show a general and decided increase in all the States and touched between 90 and 100 degrees in the Central States and the upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys. The heat was accumulating by reason of the development of an area of low pressure over the Dakotas and Minnesota, and was augmented by the effects of a high pressure over pressure over the Danoise and minnesota, and was augmented by the effects of a high pressure over the South Atlantic States. The wave was moving this way and will be felt to-day and to-morrow in the Atlantic States. The weather was clear in all districts save for a few scattered thunder showers. NELLIE MAY REALLY BE KITTIE

A YOUNG MAN COMES FORWARD WITH A CONJECTURE.

Aged Mr. Carter's Companion, He Says, May Be His Giddy Young Wife, From Whom He Has Separated and Who Used to Be Chambermaid at the St. George.

From information given Police Captain Harkins of the Adams street police station, in Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, the police believe that "Nellie of Gold street," so poetically described by Jim McGuire, the driver, as the aged Charles W. H. Carter's companion on Thursday night, when he died in a cab, does not exist. They believe that the young woman in the white shirt waist and black picture hat, who fied when the old man died, was clever enough to give the cabby the first name and address that popped into her head-anything that would served her in her panic-stricken desire to get just as far as possible from the dangerous dead body in the cab.

There is a Gold street in Manhattan, where Nellies bang the trpewriters in white shirt waists, with the picture hats not far away, and there is a Gold street in Brooklyn. where Nellies abide, but the vision of the cabby's poetical fancy eludes the cops in was with the aged millionaire during the unfortunate cab ride, the police aver.

Yesterday afternoon a youngish, well dressed man, whose name the detectives are guarding religiously, came into the Adams street station excitedly and said to the captain:

"Iam positive it was my giddy young wife that was with Mr. Carter. The description of the missing girl fits her to a T. More than that, she used to be a chambermaid at the Hotel St. George, as well as a waitress at two or three Manhattan cafés where female help is employed. I separated from her for good and sufficient reasons, and since that time she has gone under the name of 'Mrs. Brooks." it will be remembered, was described at Andy Horn's Manhattan café and the Bijou in Brooklyn as an old man of almost exactly Charles W. H. Carter's appearance, who used to go there frequently with 'his little girl."

The coincidence in names is interesting, if nothing more.

The husband of Kittie, the naughty chambermaid, told Capt. Harkins that he had known that an old man of wealth was making it possible for Kittie to have silk shirt waists, picture hats and lingerie all covered with lace.

So the sleuths are now looking for Kittie. Yesterday and last night they had no luck. Coroner Flaherty does not know when "I don't think the apprehension of the young woman is an absolute essential," said he, "but I may delay the inquest a week or even longer to give the police a chance to produce her. Her testimony, as a formal declaration of a witness to a death, is thought desirable."

At the Carter home, 149 Lincoln road, Flatbush, it was said that the time for Mr. Carter's funeral had not been set.

HIS WILL NOT LAW PROOF. First Thing That Happened to Egieston

Estate a Friendly Lawsuit. The eccentric will made by George Washington Egleston, who died suddenly of heart disease on Jan. 24 last at Kinnersley Castle, Herefordshire, England, has given rise to a suit for the construction of its terms. The plaintiff is the Central Trust Company, which was named as executor and trustee. The defendants are the widow, Amy Dorinda Egleston, and the three sons, Thomas Buchanan MacLean Egleston, Harold Paterson MacLean Egleston and Vivian Hector MacLean Egleston.

George Washington Egleston was a brother of William C. and David S. Egleston and of the late Prof. Thomas Egleston of the Columbia School of Mines. He was warned in January that he might die at any moment of heart disease, and he immediately executed the will which is now to be the subject of discussion in the courts. Ten days later he died. The widow and children are now residing at The Hollies, Milford Hill, Salisbury, Eng-

The Hollies, Millord Hill, Salsbury, England.

The will disposes of an estate that is believed to be large. The first clause directed that the testator's body be cremated and the ashes buried in Greenwood Cemetery. Subsequent clauses made the Central Trust Company sole executor and trustee, with an injunction that the company, which for years had taken care of his estate, should take his family under its kind care and supervision. But though of his estate, should take his family under of his estate, should take his family under its kind care and supervision. But though a definite income of $4,000 a year for life was set aside for the widow, and $3,000 a year each for the sons, until the youngest should arrive at the age of 30, when the total income of the estate is to be divided among them, no definite limit is imposed as to the duration of the trust, and the executor wants the courts to determine precisely what the testator intended to do with his money, and whether such intentions are tenable in law.

Throughout the will the testator interjected various sentimental clauses, among them one to the effect that no legal interference should be permitted with the estate. Barely six months have elapsed before the executor finds itself obliged to disregard this injunction altogether.

executor mas user obliged to disregard this injunction altogether.

In the concluding clauses of his will, Mr. Egleston implored his sons to pursue godly, honestand sober usefulness, to choose professions rather than mercantile pursuits, and to lead lives that would lend honor and glory to the names that they bear.

years, especially under the Spanish regime, for employees to open packages consigned to Cuban buyers and help themselves to a levy of the contents. The Cuban Government is trying to break up this petty villainy and a few days ago an employee, being caught in the act of stealing an egg, was discharged. The workmen were indignant over this act of the authorities and put the case as follows:

"Merely for having taken an egg, for the sole purpose of making a gin cocktail, with Midvale Inquest Tc-merrow.
